The Greatest Gift - Matthew 7:7-11

Most kids have parents who love them unconditionally. Parents don't need to be reminded to care, protect, and provide for their kids. Mommy guilt is a real thing. Most mothers feel like they don't do enough. Kids do need time and attention, but the most overlooked gift we can give our kids is not more time, more programs, or more things. It's you. A parent who is a great person. More often than not, kids take on your values, priorities, politics, and faith.

Watching The Day of the Lord – Joel 1 & 2

Philosophers have gotten to us. Especially the ones who told us that God has wound up the clock of time for human history, left and is off waiting and watching. When the allotted time runs out, then He will return and take appropriate action. Because of that false idea, we think there will always be enough time to make needed changes. Joel's message is that people of faith see that God is always at work in this world, acting in a way that leads us penitently to Him.

Sunday Evening Worship

Beginning today, we will be moving the Sunday evening communion time to the end of worship, instead of it's current timeslot, at the beginning. This will help our members participate in more of the worship, and help to streamline the logistics for the evening communion.

Because of my participation in March Madness (30-Day Bible Reading Challenge), I was able to revisit some of the passages that were formative in the early days of my adventure with Christ. One of those passages is Matthew 28:11-20. It is called the great commission, but I would suggest the term great is relative. It is not great until it is carried out by the church in every generation.

That was the challenge to me; to be able to carry it out in a way that was faithful to the call. This was also the challenge of the disciples who followed Jesus to the mountain in the wilderness. Matthew captures the emotional turmoil when he references that some doubted (v. 17). Why wouldn't they? In the last few months, their lives had been turned upside down. Their Lord was arrested and crucified, only to return to life. As a complication, the Roman soldiers who were charged to guard the tomb of Jesus, were given a revised media narrative to explain what really happened at the tomb and were bribed to spread the deception. Now, with reality standing before them, they had to make a decision of who they would follow.

Truth ruled the hour and the disciples worshipped Him and eagerly waited for what Jesus would tell them. And this was His charge; Go, (get up and share what you have seen and heard) and make disciples (Lead people in making a decision to follow Jesus) of all nations, (this is a cross-cultural charge) baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, (Lead them to the point of commitment to a changed life) Teaching them to observe everything I have commanded, (carry on a program of learning so people can be like Jesus) And remember, I am with you always, to the end of the age." We will not be alone as we carry out this charge.

Pretty simple, huh? No, but it is clear in explaining what we should be doing. The main sticking point is that we don't always think this commission is our responsibility, but the responsibility of the leaders of the Church. This makes me think that some of what Jesus taught is being left out or being ignored. To be sure, it is the task of the leaders, but when I read passages like 1 Thessalonians 1:5-8, I see that the first generation of believers, for some reason, thought it was their collective responsibility, each person realizing their gift had expression in the body of Christ. May we adopt this same philosophy as we seek to understand how this commission becomes of great importance in our lives.

Community Garden Update

This Spring marks the beginning of our 3rd year in the community garden, and last year we made an important transition in garden administration. It has long been the hope of the garden team that the community garden is not just "the church serving the community" but becomes "the church as a presence in the community".

Last year we made great progress in this regard, as many key caretaking jobs transitioned from belonging to church members, to belonging to community members who are gardeners. And increasingly, our community members see the Lakeview Community Garden less as "the church garden" and more as "our garden". Be warned, they are pretty proud of this garden. They just might try to recruit you to sign up! And yes, if you are interested in getting involved with the community garden, the first/best way is to sign up to become a gardener! This puts you on the ground floor to build relationships inside the garden as we learn, work, grow, and give together.

Raised Beds Available

We still have several raised garden beds that are unclaimed for this Spring. They are constructed in a way to make gardening easier for seniors or the mobility impaired. If you are interested in signing up for a garden plot, please contact Peggy in the office.

Work Day

We will have another work day in the garden on Saturday, March 18th, at 10am. During this work day, we plan on placing picnic tables in the garden commons, spreading wood chips, and prepping for a frenzy of Spring planting!

Open Doors & Receptive Hearts, by Ronnie Morrison

An evangelistic explosion took place, and over 5,000 receptive hearts were saved. This is the dynamic story of how it happened!
